

DPC Celebrates Earth Day at the Capitol

Staff of the Delta Protection Commission joined several other Resources Agencies on April 21, 2006, in celebration of Earth Day at the State Capitol in Sacramento. The event was hosted by the Department of Conservation.

In addition to the public agency booths handing out various items made of recycled materials and information about conserving natural resources, Earth Day festivities included live music, games, and educational activities for children.

Commission staff created a display board detailing the Commission's history, mission, and current activities of interest, and was on hand to answer questions from the public.
